BOSTON:
GINN & COMPANY, PUBLISHERS.
1888.

Entered, according to Act of Congress, in the year 1888, by
GINN & COMPANY,
in the Office of the Librarian of Congress, at Washington.

TYPOGRAPHY BY J. S. CUSHING & Co., BOSTON.

PRESSWORK BY GINN & COMPANY.

PREFATORY NOTE.

THIS little manual needs but a brief explanation of its appearance. Who was Cæsar? Who were the Gauls? Why did Cæsar subdue them? What kind of a soldier was he? How did Vergil look? What sort of a man was he? What kind of hexameter did he write? What did Cicero make all this fuss about? Who was this man, Catiline? was he as bad as Cicero makes him out? How may Cicero's literary style be described?

To many a student in our preparatory schools such questions as the foregoing are unanswered conundrums till long after he has left the school and entered the college. These pages are designed to tell him, as well as his teacher, where to find the answers in the briefest possible time. It is not meant to belong to the teacher only. Put a copy in the hands of every student; give five minutes in each recitation to the discussion of some point which he has been required to look up with the help of the references given; encourage individual research; and the student will understand, and enjoy Cæsar, Cicero, and Vergil.

No attempt has been made to furnish an exhaustive list of authorities, but rather those most available and useful. Those portions of the three authors mentioned above which are commonly read in most fitting schools are the basis of the references. To cover the whole ground of every course of study is manifestly impracticable. When pages are given, the number refers to the page on which the passage begins. As a rule, the edition referred to in these pages is mentioned only the first time the work is named.

SOME GENERAL HISTORIES OF ROME

BEARING UPON THE TIMES OF THESE AUTHORS ARE THE FOLLOWING: —

ARNOLD, History of the Later Roman Commonwealth. Appleton & Co., 1846.

CREIGHTON, Primer History of Rome. Appleton & Co.

DRUMANN, History of Rome. (German ed.) Königsberg, 1834.

DURUY, History of Rome. Paris, 1878. An elegant and popular work, of great value to those who use French readily.

FERGUSON, History of the Roman Republic. Philadelphia, 1805.

HOOKE, History of Rome. London, 1821. 6 vols.

KEIGHTLEY, History of Rome. Boston, 1839.

LEIGHTON, History of Rome. Clark & Maynard.

LIDDELL, History of Rome. London, 1855.

LONG, Civil Wars of Rome. London, 1844.

LONG, Decline of the Roman Republic. London. 5 vols. A huge collection of facts, and the results of extended research.

MERIVALE, History of the Romans under the Empire. Appleton & Co.

MOMMSEN, History of Rome. 4 vols. Scribners. Probably the most valuable Roman History.

NIEBUHR, Lectures on the History of Rome. London, Lockwood & Co., 1873.

STOLL, History of Rome up to the Fall of the Republic. 2 vols. Hanover, 1879. A popular German work.

VERTOT (translated by J. Ozell), History of the Revolutions of the Roman Republic to 31 B.C. 2 vols. London.

WÄGNER, Rom, Anfang, Fortgang, Ausbreitung, und Verfall des Weltreiches der Römer. 2 vols. Leipzig, 1882 (3d ed.).

See also valuable lists for reference in Methods of Teaching and Studying History. Boston, Ginn & Co. Also Boeckh's Encyclopädie, etc., p. 356.

AMONG OTHER VALUABLE GENERAL HELPS ARE THE FOLLOWING: —

Bibliotheca Scriptorum Classicorum, by Dr. E. Preuss. Wilhelm Engelmann, Leipzig, 1882 (8th ed.). A bibliography of all editions of the classics, and works bearing on them.

Bibliographical Clue to Latin Literature, edited (after Hübner) by J. E. B. Mayor. Macmillan & Co.

For the Bibliography of works on Roman literature, see Boeckh's Encyclopädie und Methodologie der Philologischen Wissenschaften. 2d ed. By Rudolf Klusmann. Teubner, Leipzig, 1886.

Teuffel's Roman Literature is the best collection of facts. Leipzig, Teubner, 1882. (The older English translation is the one referred to in this book when the page is given, but is much inferior to the later German edition.)

Hübner's Grundriss zu Vorlesungen über die Römische Literaturgeschichte (Berlin, Weidmann, 1878) is also very useful for reference. Among the periodicals that keep pace with the latest bibliography of the subject may be mentioned the quarterly supplement to Fleckeisen's "Jahrbuch"; and the "Bibliotheca Philologica Classica," which appears as a supplement to the "Jahresbericht," etc., published by S. Calvary & Co., Berlin.

The Handbuch der Klassischen Altertumswissenschaft, edited by Dr. Iwan Müller, now in process of publication (begun in 1885), contains the most recent bibliography on all subjects pertaining to classical studies. (Nordlingen, C. H. Beck.)

W. Smith's Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities (1 vol.), Dictionary of Classical Geography (2 vols.), and Dictionary of Greek and Roman Biography and Mythology (3 vols.). London.

Pauly's Real-Encyclopädie der classischen Altertumswissenschaft. 6 vols. Stuttgart, Metzler, 1839.

Illustrations of the Topography of Ancient Rome. Christoph Ziegler, Stuttgart.

History of Ancient Manuscripts, by William Forsyth. London, John Murray.

Seemann's Mythology. Leipzig, 3d ed., 1885 (accessible also in an English translation, but with poorer cuts).

Gow's Short Prefaces to School Classics. Macmillan & Co.

CHRONOLOGICAL EPITOME OF CÆSAR'S LIFE.

47. Finishes the Alexandrine war. Fights in Asia. Returns to Rome. Appointed Dictator the third time.
46. Defeats the Pompeians at Thapsus, and thus becomes master of the Roman world. Celebrates four splendid triumphs at Rome. Receives the office of Dictator for ten years, with various other honors. Carries important measures, and reforms the calendar.
45. Quells the insurrection in Spain by the battle of Munda. Appointed Dictator for life.
44. Assassinated, March 15, in the Senate-house.

GENERAL AUTHORITIES FOR THE LIFE OF CÆSAR.

I. Original Authorities.

APPIAN, Roman History, Bk. IV.

CÆSAR, Histories of the Gallic War, Civil War, Alexandrine War, African War, and Spanish War. Of these, Cæsar was the author of only seven books on the Gallic War and of the books on the Civil War. Aulus Hirtius undoubtedly wrote the eighth book of the De Bello Gallico, and is supposed to be the author of the whole or part of the rest. Niebuhr thinks that Hirtius wrote the Alexandrine War; Appian, the African war; and some unknown, narrow-minded, uneducated chronicler, the Spanish War. See Niebuhr's Lectures on Roman History, p. 603; also Smith's Dictionary, under Cæsar and Hirtius.

CICERO, Letters, in numerous places. For the thorough study of Cæsar's life from Cicero's letters, an edition of Cicero's works with a complete Index Verborum should be had, like the Paris edition of 1538-39, Apud Rob. Stephanum, "Ex Petri Victorii Codicibus," etc.

DION CASSIUS, Roman History, Bks. 38-40.

FLORUS, Epitome of Roman History, Bk. III., Chap. 10; Bk. IV., Chap. 2.

LIVY (?), Epitome of Roman History.

PLUTARCH, Lives of Eminent Men. The best English translation is that of Clough. Little, Brown, & Co., Boston, 1868. Vol. IV., p. 256. (For Plutarch's authorities, see Peter's Quellen Plutarchs in den Biographien der Römer. Halle, 1865.)

SALLUST (?), Two Epistles to Julius Cæsar, attributed to Sallust. Also Cæsar's speech in the Senate concerning the disposition of the Catilinarian conspirators, Chap. 51 of Sallust's Catiline.

SUETONIUS, Lives of the Cæsars.

VARRO, Fragments.

VELLEIUS PATERCULUS, Compendium of Roman History, Bk. II.

To these authorities might be added the LEGES JULIAE, in the Corpus Juris Civilis. The above original authorities are most easily accessible in the text-editions of Teubner, Leipzig. In Bohn's Classical Library are translations of Cæsar's complete works, real and reputed; of Sallust, Florus, and Velleius Paterculus, by J. S. Watson; and of Suetonius, by Thomson, revised by T. Forester. For additional editions and translations, see the Bibliographical Clue to Latin Literature, edited (after Hübner), by J. E. B. Mayor (Macmillan); and the Bibliotheca Scriptorum Classicorum, et Graecorum et Latinorum, Wilhelm Engelmann. Leipzig, Wilhelm Engelmann, 1882.

II. Later Authorities.

CELSUS, De Vita et Rebus gestis J. Cæsaris. London, 1697.

CHURCH, Roman Life in the Days of Cicero, p. 150. Scribner & Welford.

CREIGHTON, History of Rome, p. 75. History Primers, Appleton & Co.

DE BURY, Histoire de la Vie de Jules César. Paris, 1758.

DELORME; deutsch bearbeitet von DOEHLER; Cäsar und seine Zeitgenossen. Leipzig, 1873.

DE QUINCEY, The Cæsars, Chap. I. Houghton, Mifflin, & Co.

DRUMANN, Geschichte Roms. Contains a fine biography.

DURUY, History of Rome.

FERGUSON, History of Rome, Vol. II., p. 101.

FORSYTH, Life of Cicero, Vol. I., pp. 199-212. Charles Scribner's Sons.

FROUDE, Cæsar, A Sketch. Harper's Franklin Square Library. This is one of the most brilliant monographs in the English language; by an enthusiast, to be sure, but nevertheless presenting the best picture of Cæsar's true greatness that can be had. A review of Froude's Cæsar may be found in the Edinburgh Review, October, 1879, pp. 498-523.

LEIGHTON, History of Rome, p. 301.

LIDDELL, Life of Julius Cæsar. Houghton, Mifflin, & Co.

LIDDELL, Student's History of Rome. Harpers.

LONG, Decline of the Roman Republic.

LORD, The Old Roman World, pp. 46-50. New York, Charles Scribner & Co., 1867.

MEISSNER, Leben Caesaris, continued by Haken. Berlin, 1811. In four parts.

MERIVALE, History of Rome, Vols. I. and II. Appleton & Co. The Roman History which treats most copiously of Cæsar's life.

MERIVALE, The Roman Triumvirates, especially Chaps. IV. and V. (Epochs of Ancient History.) Charles Scribner's Sons.

MOMMSEN, History of Rome, Vol. IV., p. 289. Scribner, Armstrong, & Co. The most scholarly history of Rome; somewhat dogmatic, no doubt, but worthy of the most careful study and the highest respect.

NAPOLEON, Life of Julius Cæsar. Accessible in an American edition. Harpers. 2 vols.

NIEBUHR, Lectures on the History of Rome, p. 603.

RAWLINSON, Manual of Ancient History, pp. 480, 482, 483, 484, 486, 488-493. Harpers, 1871.

SÖTL, C. Julius Cæsar aus der Quellen. Berlin, 1826. A short German monograph.

TEUFFEL, Roman Literature, Vol. I., p. 313.

TROLLOPE, Ancient Classics for English Readers, Cæsar. New York, John B. Alden, 1883.

TROLLOPE, Life of Cicero, Vol. I. Harpers. 2 vols. Contains an adverse view of Cæsar.

WÄGNER, Anfang, Fortgang, Ausbreitung und Verfall des Weltreiches der Römer, Vol. II., p. 78. An elegant German work, yet within the reach of all. Spamer, Leipzig, 1882. 2 vols.

WILLIAMS, The Life of Julius Cæsar. Routledge, London, 1878 (2d ed.).

The above makes no pretension to being a complete list of authorities, but includes some of the more valuable and easily accessible. To these may be added such lives as appear in the editions of Cæsar edited by Allen & Greenough, Kelsey, Harkness, and others; the very excellent life found in Smith's Biographical Dictionary; also the articles on Cæsar in the Encyclopedia Britannica and Appleton's New American Cyclopaedia.
